The guests will gather fast. The friends in youth we cherished. Shall come to us once more, Again to hold communion

As in days of yore. They may be sterne and sombre, They may be young and fair; But the heart will have its chambers, The guests will gather there.

How shall it be, my sisters? Who then shall be our guests? How shall it be my brothers, When life's shadows on us rests? Shall we not midst the silence,

In accents soft and low. Then hear familiar voices, And words of long ago?

Shall we not see dear faces, Sweet smiling as of old? Till the mists of that still chamber Are sunset clouds of gold? When age has east its shadows O'er Life's declining way,

And the evening twilight gathers

I don't want to live any longer." "WHERE ARE YOU GOING?" -- An anecdote is told of Finney, the "revivalist," and a canaler, to the following effect: He was "holding forth," in Rochester, and in walking along the canal one day came across a boatman who was swearing furiously. Marching up he confronted him, and rather abruptly asked. "Sir, do you know where you are going?"

The unsuspecting man innocently replied that he was going up the canal on his boat. "No, sir, you are not," continued Finney;

"you are going to hell faster than a cenal boat can convey you."

The boatman looked at him with astonishment for a minute, and then returned the question:

"Sir, do you know where you are going?"

"I expect to go to heaven,"

"No, sir! you are going right into the

And, suiting the action to the words, he took Finney in his arms and tossed him in the water, where he would have drowned had not the boatman relented and fished him
